

Benefits of green participatory budgeting

Green PB is a way for people to make direct decisions about how budgets are spent addressing climate change and reducing our carbon footprints, which:

Increases awareness and understanding of climate change

Encourages a shift in local attitudes towards climate change and raise awareness through simple messages and projects

Helps people who want to be part of the climate change solution to turn their sense of joint responsibility into a real purpose

Reduces carbon footprints and contributes to the net-zero agenda for Scotland whilst improving the health and wellbeing of both local people and their communities

Generates sustainable projects, tailored to quickly benefit local people and their communities

Encourages a network of green PB projects that can have a positive measurable effect on the quality of life, carbon footprint and polluting emissions in local areas

Encourages creative ideas about local climate change opportunities
